syman, counsel for Mr. Craig, at 40 Wall street, and later he was arrested.

In the report of the assignee, Barclay E. V. McCarty, on lie in the Court of Common Pleas, it is stated that the liabilities of the firm are divided among 1:00 creditors. The heaviest creditors are William L. Patton, as executor, $18,500; Peter B. Honeyman of Germantown, $6,672; William H. Potter of Kingston, R. L. $7,798; Howe & Collins of Hartford, $13,180; Ludlew Patton of Orange, $7,049; Frances C. W. L. Durgea of N. Y., $0,580; William Duryea of N. Y., $23,581; the Bank of the Manhattan Company, $347,500 (secured); Cook & Lester of Norwich, $15,035; James R. Harvard of Hartford, $15,195. In addition to these accounts were others ranging from $100 to $5,000, divided among about 150 people, most of them living outside of New York. The report puts the liabilities at $188,037, and the assets nominally at $853,925. But the actual value of the assets was placed at $227,500. Of this $227,500, $216,382 was pledged with the Manhattan Company and the Holland Trust Company as collateral securities; so that there is only $11,117 of assets to apply to the unsecured debts.

and there is no equity on the securities; so that there is only $11.117 of assets to apply to the unsecured debts.

In the list of firm assets appears a claim against William L. Patton of $307.012. worth $500. For the amount advanced by the firm to him Mr. Patton put up securities valued at $120,440, and of this $120,440. $125,480 was pledged by the firm with the Manhattan Company as security for loans. Another item in the firm assets is a claim against Henry L. Saltonstall, the other partner, for $77.170. Which claim is actually worth $1,700. This loan was secured by securities valued at $4.150, all of which except $700 was pledged with the Manhattan Company.

Some of the money, as in the case of the Crair estate, was held by Patton in trust, and other securities were placed with him to be disposed of when the market should favor the owners. Lawyer Honeyman represents $250,000 of the $350,000 due to the unsecured creditors. During the summer Honeyman and Collector Kilbreth, who was counsel for Patton, tried to settle matters amicably. The creditors knew that Fatton bad wealthy relatives. But no sottlement was effected. There appears to be no intention of causing Saltonstall's arrest although an order is out for him

EMMA WOODS'S FATHER IN COURT.

With Tears He Listens to Her Dramsti The second day of the trial of Emma Woods for the murder of Lew Brown at Newark resterday was full of dramatic incident, especially when her eleven-year-old boy and the prisoner herself gave their testimony. Previous to that six neighbors testified that they heard the prisoner say she had shot Lew and that he tried to shoot her.

The first witness called for the defence was the boy Harry Ingalis, the prisoner's son. He is a bright and handsome little fellow, and surprised everybody by the clearness of his answers. Since the killing he has been de-tained in jail by the prosecution. He spoke of Lew Brown as his "papa," and told of the saloon keeper's beating his mother in his saloon keeper's beating his mother in his bedroom shortly before the shooting. Brown then got a pistol and forced his mother to go to her own room. The lad fell asleep and was awakened by a pistol report. His mother came in crying, and said his papa had shot himself. When he went into the other room Brown lay dead on the floor with the pistol in his hand. His mother was so "cruzy like," the lad said, that he hid the pistol under the bed for fear she would kill herself.

I mma Woods, when teatifying in her own behalf, said she was born in Montelair, N. J., in 1841, and, on reaching womanhood, went with her father to Cincinnati, where she was employed in a bookbinding shop, and was betraved by Philip N. Ingalls, the father of Harry.

The witness wald her father was in court.

street and owned half a dozen carriages. His factory was in Centre street. The sudden death of his wife drove him to drink, and within a few years the big fortune he had accumulated disappeared.

He made another, however, through fresh inventions in oil stoves and oil stove burners and an electric gas lighting torch, but he squandered this also, and, for the past five or six years, he lived a somewhat precarious existence in Brooklyn. On Monday night he visited several saloons with Gilbert True of 331 Cumberland street, and did not return to his boarding house until a late hour.

When Mr. True called to see him yesterday morning his body was suspended by the neck from the gas pipe. The pipe was only four and one-half feet from the floor, and, to carry out his purpose, for he was over six feet high, be had to press his weight on the rope so as to strangle to death. A son and daughter of the suicide left him some time ago and settled in Boston. They have been notified by telegraph of his death.

MEYER SANDER ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 17 .- About 9 o'clock this morning Meyer Sander attempted suicide in his room at the Windsor Hotel. He fired a bullet into his forhead, but it was flattened against the frontal bone and was easily extracted. He is at the City Hospital, and will probably recover. He is a dealer in tallow, and came here from New York about a week ago. Sander left this note in his room: "Notify J. Stern, foot of West Fortieth street, New York. I bequeath everything I have to my folks."

Young Sander has only been in this country about three years. For a year he was employed as a clerk by Joseph Stern, the butcher of 1831 West Fortieth street. He left Mr. Stern about three weeks ago to go to Harrisburg, where he was going in business for himself. Since he left New York Mr. Stern has received one letter from him. In it the young man said that he had established himself in business and was doing well.

that he had established himself in business and was doing well.

Mr. Stern told a Sun reporter last night that he had no idea why the young man had attempted to take his life, but supposed that it was because he had not been successful in his new venture. He had heard of the young man's act through the hospital physicians of Harrisburg, he said. They had wired bim that the young man would recover.

SOON SAW ENOUGH OF THE WORLD The Adventures of Three Runsway Boys Ended by a Railroad Accident.

Joseph Mangine, 15 years old, and Thomas Hughes, 1d years old, of Albany, ran away from home last Friday. They first rode in the caboose of a freight train to Philadelphia. Sunday was spent in wandering about that city, and there they picked up a boy named Harry Robinson, 15 years old, who consented to join fortunes with them in seeing the world. When night came on the boys got hungry. and, as they had no money, they longed for home. The other boys told Robinson great tales of Albany, and so Albany was decided upon as the objective point, They jumped upon a train Sunday night, but were put off at upon a train Sunday night, but were put off at Trenton. There they succeeded in getting a square meal from a kind-hearted man. Next they rode to Jersey City and late Monday night they found themselves on West street. With Albany still in mind they plodded north to Sixty-fifth street and Eleventh avenue. There a switching engine and several cars came tearing down the track, and a man who attempted to cross was crushed to death under the wheels. The sight so terrified the boys that they went to the West Sixty-sighth street station and asked to be protected for the night. Polloeman Calahan took them to the Yorkville Police Court vesterday, and Justice Smith turned them over to the Charities Commissioners to be sent home.

ARSENIC IN HIS MEDICINE.

His Wife and Architect Rowley Held for Wilhelmina Huffmire and Edwin Rowley are now in Raymond street jail, Brooklyn, on charge of having attempted to polson Calvin Huffmire, the woman's husband, and their case will come before the present Grand Jury. Mr. Huffmire is a Flatlands oyster dealer, and the alleged crime took place last summer at his home in that town. His almost fatal illness occurred after a visit of Rowley to his house and the administration of some medicine by his wife. Since his recovery his wife left him, and, it is said, has been living with Rowley. At the examination before Justice Hendrickson at Canarise Dr. Magnan testified that he had analyzed some of the medicine given to Mr. Huffmire, and discovered the presence of arsenic. Mr. Huffmire said he had no thought of making a charge against his wife until she left him and took up with llowley. The desertion took piace when he was thought to be at the point of death. Rowley is an architect, and is said to be closely related to an English baronet of that name. and the administration of some medicine by that name.

Dr. Parkburst Says the Law Is Violated to Hugh Sievin's Saloons.

Dr. Parkhurst sent a letter to Mayor Gilroy yesterday against the selection of Hugh Slevin, a saloon keeper, as a member of the present jury. The letter set forth that the Excise law was continually violated in Slavin's four saloons, and was accompanied by affidavits corroborating this. The premises in which if Slevin's Seventh avenue saloon is the letter says, belong to the wife of Superintenden, it when

MELLO FIRING INTO RIO.

HIS LATEST SHOTS INFLICT CONSID-ERABLE DAMAGE

Many of the People Besert the City-The Steamship Morron's Experiences at the Capital-Mello Gets Supplies by Strategy BUENOS ATRES, Oct. 17 .- Advices received here are to the effect that Admiral Mello, commander of the insurgent Brazilian fleet, again bombarded Rio de Janeiro yesterday. damage done is said to have been great. Many of the residents who remained in the city during the prior bombardments are now fleeing to interior cities and towns.

President Peixoto continues his efforts to organize a fleet wherewith to give battle to The British freight steamship Horrox, which arrived yesterday forenoon, brought news of the bombardment of Rio de Janeiro by the insurgent fleet under Admiral Mello. Capt. Cadogan of the Horrox told these facts to the reporters who boarded his ship:

"We anchored in the harbor of Rio on the morning of Sept. 6 and remained there until the 22d. On the day we came there the insurgents formally opened hostilities. We were in a position where we could see everything that was going on, but none of the shells or builets struck our vessel. On the 16th a stray shell exploded about ten feet from the ship's side and a splinter of iron, two by three inches in measurement, fell upon the deck. This was the nearest we came to being hit, although the bullets and shells flew so near to us that we could hear them with uncomfortable distinct-

"The rebei fleet devoted most of its attention to a suburb of Rio called Nictheroy, on the opposite side of the harbor. Here the Government possessed a big arsenal which the insurgents were after. During the struggle for the possession of this suburb I heard that nearly 400 persons were killed. Nictheroy is merchants and bankers of Rio, and as the ferry which runs across the harbor was stopped by the insurgents, many business men who were in Rio were unable to reach their homes. The rebels kept a constant patrol of the harbor, and seized all turs, launches, salling vessels, and rowboats which did not belong to foreign vessels.

"Ididn't have any trouble with them at all after the first day or two. I learned that it wasn't sale to leave the ship's side without having a British flag with me. My boats were overhauled by the rebel tugs several times before I began to fly my flag from them. The small rowboats of all the foreign vessels flew their respective flags while on errands, and were not annoyed in any way. I believe that a good many of them used the British flag when they were not entitled to it, but I never heard of any trouble arising from that source.

"Admiral Mello appeared to have his forces under very good discipline, and handed them with considerable skill. He armed a large number of tugs with howitzers and marines with rifles. These tugs patrolled the harbor all night long, firing on all suspicious vessels, and at all points where it was thought that soldiers might be concealed.

"While we were lying at the wharf loading coffee a number of ships arrived from Buenos Ayres, bringing cattle and dried beef. The British flag protected their cargoes from Mello, who, however, was sorely in need of supplies. He finally captured the food by strategr. He pretended to be on the point of salling away from the harbor and relaxed the vigilance of the harbor patrol. The British skippers were very eager to land their cargoes and get away. They insisted on having the cattle and meat taken off at once. A number of native lighters were procured by the city merchants to whom the supplies were consigned. Beef was then scarce in the city and commanded an enormous price. Just as the loaded lighters started for the shore the rebels swooped down in boats and launches of all descriptions and captured them.

"Complaint was made to the British Consul. who protested to Admiral Mello. The latter released the unloaded lighters, and sent receipts for the cargoes to the owners. He hold, however, that the Consul had no right to ask for a return of the cattle, removed from the ships to the lighters, they were no longer under the protection of the British flag.

The whole affair appeared to me to be merely a revolt of the navy against the army. The navy was jealous of the powers usurped by the army, and considered President Peixoto to be merely the champion of the army, who wanted to make everything in the Government subservient to the soldiers.

The newspapers which Capt. Cadogan brought from Bio de Janeiro contain the following proclamation, which Admiral Mello issued to the people of Brazili.

As an officer of the navy, a Brazilian, and a citizen of a free country, I give battle to the demolishers of the Constitution, and to restore the sway of law, order, and peace.

No longing for power, no desire for office, no action aspiration to exercise control by means of violence aspiration to exercise control by means of violence leads me into this revolution.

That the Brazilian nation may display its ability to That the Brazilian nation may remablican govern-purpose.

Accompanying this was a manifesto signed by civilians who had joined the insurgents, in which they say:

Peixoto has unsurappleously troiden the Constitution under foot, insolently annulling the autonomy of the States and the political honesty of republican forms, arbitrarily squandering the public money and keeping up the war in Ito Grande in spite of the universal desire for peace.

up the war in its Grande in spite of the universal desire for peacs.

Several of the sailors on the Horrox with nessed the killing of the coxswain of an Italian man-of-war boat. The boat was heading for the shore, when a voiley from the soldiers, who were hidden behind breastworks, killed the coxswain and wounded three of the rowers. The sailors say that the Brazilian Government immediately paid to the representative of the Italian Government £10,000 indemnity.

One of the sailors said:

"The whole city of Rio is full of bands of thieves, who are robing and killing as much as they please. One of these gangs is commanded by a woman named Louisa. She is a desperate character, and is very popular among the disorderly classes. Two policemen went out to arrest her one night. The next morning they were found dead, each with a dagger in his heart."

that Patrolman J. C. McGee speaks Spanish as well as if his name were O'Higgins, and if the board finds that McGee is competent, and if it has the power to do so, Mr. Balz would be glad to have McGee detailed for the work.

McGee is a member of the mounted squad in the Thirty-first precinct, and has been on the force about three years. He used to be a cowboy, and is known on the plains as "Suspender Jim." In explaining how he got the name, he says that he rode into an Indian village one day as several of the bucks were trying to mount a bucking bronco. He ofered to bet them he could ride the beast without a halter and they took the wager. McGee says he simply fastened his suspenders to the horse's lower law, and jumping on his back soon had him subdued. The man has been a splendid officer, but the Commissioners do not know whether or not he is capable of organizing a Police Department. The Board decided to ask Mr. Baiz to explain more fully what Honduras wants. We seet a man to Guate-mais years ago to dea similar jeb.

INSURE YOUR TITLE. An abstract is worthless as a protec

It is a mere opinion based on such facts as the examiner has happened to learn relating to the title.

It is what H. & W. relied upon when they purchased three lots on B street and erected a $100,000, ballding thereon. The abstract and opinion of counsel were not made primarily for H. & W. but for a party who loaned a portion of the purchase money to enable them to take title to the lots.

On a sale of the property by H. & W., after the ersotion of the new building, it was made apparent that as to one of the lots bought from executors, the deed of the executors was not operative, because they had no power to sell. This would not have been serious if the heirs who did have the title had all been of full age. Those who were, promptly quit-claimed their interest, but there was one infant who could not do so, and H. & W. were compelled to take proceedings in court to pro-cure a conveyance of the infant's interest and pay over to the guardian the cash for the same, sithough they had once paid for it on their original purchase. They had no guarantee of title, and inasmuch as the examination, when they bought, was made for the lender and without responsibility to them, they had no recourse but had to stand the loss.

TO THE HOLDERS OF

AMERICAN WATER WORKS CO. (Omaha Water Works) Bonds.

The frantic efforts of a certain alleged committee to scare you into the belief that the Omana Water Works property is in such a desperate condition as to require the immediate services of a cotorie of self-constituted francial surgeons, are very anusing to those who know the real situation. For the benefit of those bond-bolders who are not craying to be assessed for the holders who are not craving to be assessed for the privilege of getting into trouble and paying expensive surgeons for attempting an unnecessary and impossible operation, i will state.

First. The committee referred to has not now, and will not olisin, the support of a majority of the abovenamed bonds.

Second The mortgage securing said bonds will not be foreclosed by virtue of any existing default no matter what may be said by the committee to the contractive what may be said by the committee to the contractive that may be said by the committee to the contractive that the said committee and the Farmers' Lean and Trust Company as trustee by reason fed the Fresident of said trust company acting as a member of the committee. The dual position thus assumed runst impress all who are familiar with the duties imposed upon a trustee as most improper.

Third. The reasons advanced by the committee why you should not sail me your coupons are too frivolous to be discussed.

Fourth, if the said trustee shall undertake to foreclose said mortgage by reason of any existing default, such action on its part will be restrained and reversed as
